

Sheffield welcomes international students

Sheffield is committed to welcoming international students and is proud and grateful for all they bring to our city, which is their home for a time.

These students, who study at Sheffield's two universities and college, make a contribution to our city which is much more than just financial. They work in our hospitals, schools and businesses. They volunteer for more than 140 Sheffield charities and add new perspectives, food and cultural opportunities.

Years after our international students leave Sheffield, they are global ambassadors for the city, the region and its people. They feel proud of the education and friendships they made here. We are proud that they go on to make the world a better place, working as scientists, engineers, doctors, nurses, teachers and leaders in over 100 countries.

Our city is also deeply grateful for the investment and vibrancy our international students bring - over £120 million into our city's economy each year, around 10% of inward investment in Sheffield. Our city regeneration and the growth of many small businesses owes a huge amount to international students. Now, in a time of change, we want to reassure potential international students from around the world that you are welcome in Sheffield. Thousands of others have had a wonderful experience in this city, and this will continue.
